Consider Pets In Hot Weather

Because Southern Californians can expect quite a bit more hot weather before winter comes, your Los Angeles S.P.C.A. reminds you to consider your pets during the hot spells, because animals feel the heat, too.

Your pets need plenty of fresh drinking water at all times, and a shady spot in which to rest is another necessity, points out George M. Crosier, general manager of the Society.

More information on caring for pets is provided in a free booklet available from the Society, according to Crosier. This booklet outlines care for your pet on vacation. If you are planning a late vacation on which you must take your pet, you may obtain a copy of this booklet by calling the Society at RRepublic 2-0113; or visit your nearest S.P.C.A. shelter. Shelters are located at 5026 W. Jefferson, in Los Angeles; 9330 S. Garfield, South Gate; 12910 S. Yukon, Hawthorne; and 20612 Laguna Canyon Road, Laguna Beach.
